Ceramic Tile Promotion Fund
of Greater New York and New Jersey

Founded in 1912, over 100 years ago, by William Erath as Central Tile Company of Brooklyn, he began installing bathroom tile in a 50 unit row-house development. Based on the success of the installation, William continued operating primarily in the residential sector until the 1930's. In the 40's, when William's son, also named William, joined the company, the company's focus shifted from residential to commercial tile installations in larger commercial buildings in Manhattan. Together as father and son they began working as sub-contractors providing tile-setting services for general contractors. In 1951, the family decided to re-christen itself as Wm. Erath & Son. That's when Scott's father, Robert, joined the business. The company welcomes a 5th generation into the business with Scott's oldest son, Thomas Erath, who has been involved with the company since 2005, learning everything from sweeping the warehouse floor to estimating and supervising in the field.
